Fall in Market.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN., February 11.

Not a clue as to the whereabouts in New York of William Walker, the missing treasurer of the Savings Bank of New Britain, had been received today by the bank directors. No clue as to the location of the securities which Walker took from the bank has been found, in spite of a very active search in New York and several other cities. The bank situation apparently resis on the apprehension of Walker, for the run of depositors has ended. The actual shortage remains unchanged at $565,000.

The belief is held by the directors that the greater portion of the missing securities have been hypothecated, as inquiry among financial interests in New York City brought out the fact that Walker would have been unable to dispose of the securities, except at a considerable sacrince, owing to the state of the market; but he would have been able to borrow money on them without much difficulty.

The developments of the day were that Prosecuting Attorney Mitchell, on his own initiative, drew up a warrant for the arrest of Walker on the charge of appropriating to his own use two bonds of $1,000 each belonging to the bank, and sent Chief of Police Rawlings to New York to inform the police there of the fact that the missing treasurer of the fact that the missi

Sunset Was Beautiful, But Weird, and Caused Apprehensive Few to Shiver.

Sive Few to Shiver.

A weird effect at sunset yesterday afternoon caused considerable apprehension in Richmond, a number of people calling up The Times-Dispatch office to inquire if there was any probability of an earthquake or other unusual disturbance. The afternoon was overcust, the clouds that offer a hint of what the settled down, but just before sunset there was a break to the west, and the sun's glow came in on the under side of the clouds, causing a beautiful color effect, which attracted the attention of people in all parts of the city. On Main Street business was almost suspended for a few minutes, and people stood in the streets admiring the coloring of the sunset.

The day was warm and the morning passed brightly, the sky becoming overcast toward midday. In a few sheltered spots may yet be seen remnants of the recent snow, while on the more open streets dust is already blowing in clouds that promise ill for what the March winds may have in store. The hope is general, however, that the worst of the winter is past, and there are many indications of an early spring.

The work at the missions has settled down to the crimary routine, supplying the poor and the sick and those who are incapacitated from working. As the winter goes on a larger number come to the end of their resources and have to ask for assistance to carry them until the coming of spring. Superintendent Davis, of the City's Charities, is doing an excellent work among the colored people, among whom there are many worthy cases of old and infirm persons who could not work if the opportunity was offered, and to wnom the city must continue to afford some assistance.

According to Williams's story he suffered mental aberration when he mystcjously disappeared from a hotel in Chicage. Williams said:

"On July 6, 1894, I suddenly found myself in Hammond, Ind. I had no recollection of how I got there, and it was only by asking strangers that I found where I was and what day of the month and year it was. I began to trudge away without purpose, and found myself some days later here in Merrillville."
